Higher Education Administration Track

Program Description/Goals

Much like the general Doctor of Education in Educational Leadership and Policy Studies, the program culminating in the Doctor of Education in Educational Leadership and Policy Studies - Higher Education Administration Track is designed to provide the opportunity for students to enhance analytical skills for solving problems in educational institutions. The primary difference from the general doctoral degree is that the Higher Education Administration Track is designed to prepare practitioners specifically in the field of higher education, both nationally and internationally, who will become important leaders in private and public postsecondary institutions and be able to apply evidence-based practices to improve higher-education outcomes.

The Track's program requirements include a minimum of 75 graduate credits. Students must enter the program with a master's degree and can transfer up to 36 graduate-level credits into the Ed.D. program. Thus, students must complete a minimum of 39 credits at the doctoral level at FIU.

Upon successful completion of the Ed.D., we expect each graduate will be able to:

- Promote the improvement of higher education.
- Apply scholarly research for evidence-based practice.
- Provide leadership by applying advanced theoretical and methodological perspectives problems in higher education.

While the program is designed for the working professional, students will be expected to devote significant time to the required coursework and the research necessary to successfully complete an applied dissertation (see "The Applied Dissertation" below). The program is structured in cohort format, and students are expected to finish in three years (see "Program of Study" below).

Admissions Requirements

Admission to the program is only the Fall term. The deadline for an application to be submitted is February 15. Applicants to the program must submit the following records and documents to the Office of Graduate Admissions:

1. A completed online application for Graduate Admission with appropriate fees;
2. An official copy of the Graduate Record Exam (GRE) scores;
3. Official transcripts of all higher education institutions attended;
4. A Master's Degree in Higher Education or related field;
5. Three letters of reference attesting to the applicant's ability to succeed in doctoral study;
6. A current resume/vitae;
7. A statement setting forth the applicant's career goals and relates these goals to the completion of the doctoral program; and
8. A writing sample illustrating academic writing skills (e.g., paper submitted for academic credit; professional report using research);

9. Statement of support from supervisor (if applicant intends on being employed while in the program).

No action will be taken on incomplete files. A file is considered incomplete if any of the above is missing.

Admission into the program will be based on the criteria noted below. Exceptions to one or more of the stated criteria may be granted on the basis of other compelling evidence that the applicant is likely to be successful in this doctoral program.

1. A grade point average (GPA) of at least 3.0 (on a 4.0 scale) in upper level undergraduate credits;
2. A cumulative 3.25 GPA in completed graduate work.
3. There is no minimum requirement for the GRE. However, candidates are advised that low combined scores can result in denial of the application.
4. International graduate student applicants whose native language is not English are required to submit a score for the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) or for the International English Language Testing System (IELTS). A total score of 80 on the iBT TOEFL or 6.5 overall on the IELTS is required.
5. The evidence from the writing sample that the applicant can perform doctoral-level work. • Professional experience (other than a graduate assistantship) in a college or university is highly preferred.
6. A possible interview with the Program faculty.

Members of the program's graduate faculty will constitute the Doctoral Admissions Committee, which will review the application and all supporting documentation. Upon completion of the review of the applicant's file and the interview, the Doctoral Admissions Committee will make recommendations for acceptance or rejection to the University Graduate School.

As admission to programs is competitive, meeting minimum admission requirements does not assure admission into the program. A candidate for admission to the program will be judged not only on the basis of quantitative criteria (e.g., GRE and GPA), but also in relation to prior experience, especially as it relates to future career goals. Additional information is available from the individual program faculty.

The Applied Dissertation

Doctoral students will enter the program as a cohort and engage in a prolonged study of a critical problem or concern in higher education, selected for each cohort by the program's faculty, culminating in an applied dissertation that offers a solution(s) for this problem. This problem will thus become the underlying focus of all coursework and the dissertation research. The program is designed to be completed in three years.

During the first year in the program, students will examine the articulated problem in order to identify underlying causes and associated factors via a variety of courses intended to approach problems from different theoretical and methodological perspectives. Students will also complete their dissertation proposals by the end of the second year. In the third year, students work on their dissertations, which will entail creating solutions to the identified problems. Unlike many dissertations, which have implications for the larger body of literature and scholarship, applied dissertations have implications for the organization(s) dealing with the problem at hand. Although different from a traditional dissertation in its focus, students are nevertheless expected to excel in written and oral skills associated with reviewing scholarly literature, collecting data, and interpreting the results in light of previous studies.

Students will demonstrate mastery of the oral and written skills needed to complete their applied research through a candidacy exam/dissertation proposal indicating readiness for conducting their studies offering solutions to their problem of practice. Students will then evaluate the effectiveness of this solution in their dissertation. The candidacy exam, proposal, and dissertation will be submitted to, and presented orally before, the student's Dissertation Committee. Typically, we expect that students will complete coursework and research in two years. It is possible that some students may need more than two years to complete their research, in which case they will be required to enroll in at least three credit hours of dissertation until they have successfully defended their applied dissertation.

Candidacy Examination and Advancement to Candidacy

To advance to candidacy, the student must select a dissertation committee and submit a draft of his or her proposal to the dissertation committees. The dissertation committee will review the proposal and determine, by majority votes, whether or not to advance the student to candidacy and to the proposal defense. This process constitutes the candidacy exam. To continue in the program, and barring official approval by the University Graduation School of a leave of absence during this process, the student will have 1 year after completion of all non-dissertation coursework to be admitted to candidacy.

If the dissertation committee advances the student to candidacy, the student will enroll in the following term in EDH 7964 and EDH 7983. In those courses, the student will continue to work on their proposal, complete the IRB approval process, if applicable, and successfully defend his or her dissertation proposal. The student will be required to submit all documents and forms related to the advancement to candidacy and dissertation proposal, including the D-2 and D-3, to the University Graduate School at the same time.

The University Graduate School admits students to candidacy. After advancement to candidacy, students must be continuously enrolled in a minimum of 3 dissertation credits (EDH 7980) each term until graduation.

Dissertation Proposal

A student admitted to candidacy must successfully complete and defend his or her proposal for the applied dissertation, which constitutes the research plan for the dissertation. Because the applied dissertation proposal is part of the candidacy exam process, please refer to the section on "Candidacy Examination and Advancement to Candidacy" in this catalog. More information about the dissertation proposal is available from the student's advisor.

Time to Completion

While this program is designed to be completed in 3 years, the University policy permits only 9 years to complete a doctoral program, counting from admission to graduation. Students must have completed all coursework and program requirements within that time, including a successful defense of the dissertation. Coursework applied toward completion of program requirements cannot be more than nine years old at the time of graduation, unless the coursework was transferred from a previously-earned graduate degree.

Graduation Requirements

The following is required for successful graduation from the program:

Successful completion of all course work and candidacy exam; GPA of 3.00 or better; and Successful completion, defense, and University approval of the applied dissertation.

2. A cumulative 3.25 GPA for all graduate work attempted.
3. International graduate student applicants whose native language is not English are required to submit a score for the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) or for the International English Language Testing System (IELTS).
