Overview

Self-composure, confidence, and the ability to clearly articulate and communicate information are valuable skills for all educators. The Public Speaking Competition is designed to highlight students who demonstrate these qualities by combining thoughtful preparation and confident delivery into an interesting presentation on a current education topic.

Students participating in this competition will compose and deliver a speech of approximately 400 to 600 words (three to five minutes when spoken aloud) on the assigned topic. Contestants will deliver the presentation during a Zoom video session on the day of the virtual conference.

This is an individual competition. Only one student entry per chapter will be considered. Each chapter must select one student to represent them. Twelve (12) entries total will be accepted for this competition. Entries will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis.

Assigned Topic

Online learning has been a growing trend among K-12 students nationwide. According to the Thomas B. Fordham Institute, roughly 5 million students across the United States took part in digital learning in the 2015-2016 school year, and many students in grades K-12 received a high-quality education online through a full-time online public school.

The COVID-19-related school closures across the country forced a shift to distance learning and a crash course for online learning plans and technology for students and teachers. Despite the many challenges that teachers, parents and students faced during the abrupt transition to distance learning last spring, some parents and students are finding that they prefer online education. Teachers are adapting to virtual classrooms and learning online teaching strategies to support their students.

What does this mean for the future of teaching and learning? Is virtual teaching a skill of the future? What factors must be considered when planning instruction in a virtual classroom? What barriers might a teacher encounter when delivering distance learning? How could a teacher overcome these barriers?
